Philly the place 'to open a craft brew pub'

The craft beer movement has shattered people's thinking about the way we drink and brew our frothy beverages.

Fizzy yellow beers like Budweiser and Corona are gone. Philadelphia taps are full of rye IPAs, Belgian pales and smoked porters.

"If you want to open a craft brew pub on the East Coast, you come to Philly," said Mark Edelson, co-owner of Iron Hill Brewery. While the "buy local, buy fresh" campaign has taken off here, there are plenty of places where the message isn't getting through.

That was one of a multitude of topics debated at yesterday's Forum of the Gods, an all-star panel discussion featuring the nation's top craft brewers. Five breweries — Nebraska, Ballast Point, Stone Brewing, Iron Hill, Dock Street — put out 16 of their finest sudsy offerings. None of them were of the fizzy yellow variety.

"People are complaining about a bad economy and no jobs, but they are sitting there drinking Corona. It doesn't make any sense," said Rosemarie Certo, owner of Dock Street. MIKE GREGER

Teen shot in head while on webcam

The teen was found on East Cumberland Street at 1:15 a.m. Police said this morning that preliminary reports indicate he shot himself in the head.

According to multiple media reports, the man was inside the front room of the house chatting on a webcam with two brothers, aged 22 and 13, when he was shot with a handgun. Police believe the shooting was accidental. METRO/AW

Cops taken off street after tussle

KENSINGTON. Four Philadelphia police officers are on administrative duty pending an Internal Affairs investigation into a violent arrest of an 18-year-old man that was caught on video.

The arrest shows three officers trying to wrestle Marcus Warryton to the ground on Monday after Warryton was involved in a car accident. As officers tried to subdue the teen, a fourth officer repeatedly swings and hit him with a baton. METRO/SDL

Resigns in an epic huff, declaring Donald Trump's Miss USA pageant 'rigged' Veteran pageant contestant had long decade of near misses

GETTY IMAGES

After a decade of qualifying rounds and near-misses, this year's Miss USA pageant was 27-year-old Sheena Monnin's last shot at winning the contest and going on to compete for the coveted Miss Universe title.

Monnin gained sashes in various Florida and Texas counties in years past and was first runner-up for Miss Pennsylvania USA in 2010 and 2011 before finally taking the state.

But the scorned beauty queen surrendered her crown Monday after losing the national pageant the night before and took to Facebook to furiously allege the outcome was rigged.

"In good conscience I can no longer be affiliated in any way with an organization I consider to be fraudulent, lacking in morals, inconsistent and in many ways trashy," she wrote, claiming that another competitor stumbled upon a final telecast sheet with the top five contestants already filled in.

The pageant world is calling the incident a case of sour grapes. "My personal opinion is she didn't crack the top 16 and she didn't know how to deal with not cracking the top 16," said Ralphie Aversa, who judged Miss USA state qualifiers in Pennsylvania and Connecticut. "And then Monday and Tuesday ensued."

"[Monnin] in a sense ... stole the dreams of a lot of other women." AVERSA

Aversa likened the highly regulated scoring process — which is overseen by an auditor, tabulated by a statistician and watched by security escorts who don't even let judges take a bathroom break unchaperoned — to jury duty.

"I believe they use a computerized system down there," echoed 30-year circuit pageant coach and director of Mrs. Minnesota-America Faith Schway, who also attended Sunday night. "There's no way a contestant in Miss USA or any pageant I'm involved with would have access to anything like that [list]," she said, adding that it's not the first time someone has made such an allegation.

"I know sour grapes the day after a pageant is very common," she said. "Honestly, I feel this was just another ploy by a contestant to get some attention to herself."

The Donald has none of it

PHILADELPHIA. Monnin also drew the wrath of Miss Universe Organization co-owner Donald Trump, who made the media rounds yesterday to announce his intention to sue her for calling the company "fraudulent."

"Whether you're a businessman, a beauty queen or president of the United States, if you attack Donald Trump, he's going to attack back," Aversa said.

The organization released an e-mail Monnin allegedly sent to state pageant official Randy Sanders Monday that they say reveals her real reason for quitting. "I refuse to be part of a pageant system that has so far and so completely removed itself from its foundational principles as to allow and support natural born males to compete in it," the message read in part.

The pageant changed its rules this year to allow a transgender woman to compete in its Canadian arm.

▶ Michelle Obama told Philadelphia supporters that "this election will be closer than before."

With the presidential race tightening, first lady Michelle Obama made a campaign stop in Philadelphia yesterday at the National Constitution Center to rally supporters and fire up volunteers.

President Barack Obama has a double-digit lead over Republican candidate Mitt Romney in Pennsylvania, according to the latest Franklin and Marshall poll, but is virtually tied with Romney in national polls. Mrs. Obama's visit marked her first of the 2012 campaign to a state that her husband won in 2008 and will need again in his re-election bid.

The first lady was joined by Mayor Michael Nutter, District Attorney Seth Williams and Democratic Attorney General candidate Kathleen Kane. She talked about President Obama's vision and his efforts to turn around a sluggish economy.

"While we still have a long way to go to repairing our economy, millions of people are collecting a paycheck today," she told the crowd.

Mrs. Obama also highlighted the president's support for women's rights, including equal pay, better health care coverage and the appointment of two female Supreme Court justices. She also impressed the importance of grassroots campaigning and voter registration.

"Don't forget this election will be even closer than before," she said.

Supporters said they stand behind Obama in spite of the economy's slow improvement and even if they disagree with him on social issues. Two-time volunteer Denise Dicks said she is all right with the president's controversial support of gay marriage, even if she does not endorse the idea.

"In the beginning I didn't have a clear picture, but now I believe he's saying people should have a choice if that's their (preference)."

"Everything doesn't happen overnight and that's what America needs to remember. He has inherited a lot of mess."

Three things Metro noticed

1 Dems will sorely miss Ed Rendell. Without the gregarious and insightful former guv, Pennsylvania is left with the likes of Mayor Michael Nutter and District Attorney Seth Williams to promote Obama's work, but one is not well known outside the city and the other is not well liked inside it. Nutter draws boos even in the city.

2 No mention of Romney. The first lady said repeatedly that voters know President Obama and "what he stands for," and while she never said Mitt Romney's name, the implication was that voters do not know Romney well.

3 Not everyone believes. A handful of Obama critics demonstrated near the Constitution Center during the event with signs that read "Hoping for a decent job," and "A better America without Obamanomics."

Included on prominent list Hope bolstered that N. Broad building, now a furniture store, can be saved

RICARD LARMA/METRO

Joe Frazier's North Philadelphia gym has been named one of America's 11 Most Endangered Historic Places for 2012 by the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

Each year, the organization releases the list to highlight the fight for preservation. Frazier's gym on North Broad Street is where the legendary boxer trained for his epic fight against Muhammad Ali and later turned into a gym for the community, but today the three-story building houses a discount furniture store and is vacant on the top two floors. It is also listed for sale.

"Joe Frazier was a sports legend, and he deserves a place that celebrates his legacy and his contributions to the sport of boxing."
STEPHANIE MEEKS, OF THE NATIONAL TRUST

The National Trust says that the gym has not been designated as a historic place at the local or national level, putting it at risk for destruction or irreparable damage.

The Preservation Alliance of Greater Philadelphia and a group of Temple University students are partnering to raise the $10,000 needed to nominate the building to the Philadelphia and national historic registries. They also hope to find a buyer who will commit to preserving the building for future use.

"Without question, Joe Frazier's Gym is an important historic and cultural site — and bringing both protection and recognition to this site by placing it on the local and national registers would be a fitting tribute to one of our greatest athletes of all time," Stephanie Meeks, president of the National Trust for Historic Preservation, said in a statement.

Also included on the list is the last-known surviving boyhood home of Malcolm X in Boston, and the Princeton Battlefield in Princeton, N.J., which was the site of a historic battle in the American Revolution.

Statue-less

In 2010, Bernard Hopkins wondered aloud why there isn't a Joe Frazier statue in a city that prides itself on a fictional boxer. "If they find somewhere we can put it," he told Metro, "I will pay for it." The wait continues two years later.

▶ The problem then and likely still: Frazier's Gym sits on the border between two different City Council districts, and neither Council President Darrell Clarke nor former Councilwoman Donna Reed-Miller or new Councilwoman Cindy Bass have resolved to put a statue there.

▶ Tim McCloskey, who started a "Joe Frazier deserves a statue" group on Facebook last year, said after hearing about the new Giardello statue that "there's something wrong with a city that can't name a street after the heavyweight champion of the world."

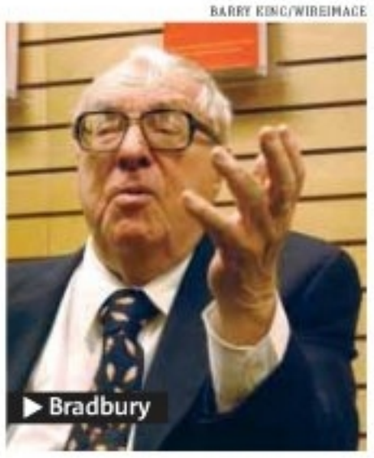
Bradbury escapes a terrifying future

BARRY KING/WIREIMAGE



▶ Bradbury

Ray Bradbury, a giant of American literature who helped popularize science fiction with poetic, cerebral works such as "The Martian Chronicles," died on Tuesday in Los Angeles. He was 91.

Bradbury brought not only futuristic vision but literary sensibilities to his more than 500 works published including "Fahrenheit 451," a classic dystopian novel about book censorship in a future society, and other favorites such as "The Illustrated Man" and "Something Wicked This Way Comes."

As a science fiction writer, Bradbury said he did not want to predict the future — but sometimes wanted to prevent it. Such was the case with "Fahrenheit 451," a book published in 1953 about a totalitarian, anti-intellectual society where banned books are burned by "firemen."

The novel, which Bradbury wrote on a rented typewriter at the UCLA library, featured a world that might sound familiar to 21st century readers — wall-sized interactive televisions, earpiece communication systems, omnipresent advertising and political correctness.

But for a futurist, Bradbury did not always embrace technology. He called the Internet a scam perpetrated by computer companies, was disdainful of automatic teller machines and denounced video games as "a waste of time for men with nothing else to do."

He said he never learned to drive a car after witnessing an accident that killed several people and did not travel by airplane until much later in life.

Because of his visionary thinking, NASA brought Bradbury in to lecture astronauts, Disney consulted with him while designing its futuristic Epcot Center in Florida and shopping mall developers sought his input.

Bradbury, who suffered a stroke in 1999 and ended up using a wheelchair, and his wife, Maggie, who died in 2003, had four children. REUTERS

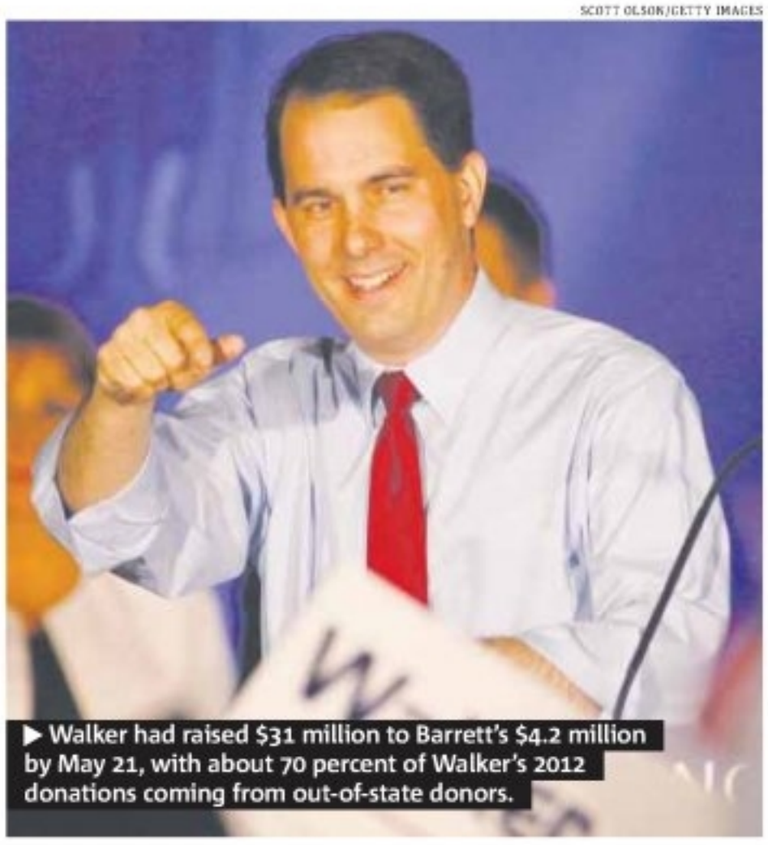
Walker's win in Wisconsin boost to conservatives

SCOTT OLSON/GETTY IMAGES



▶ Walker had raised $31 million to Barrett's $4.2 million by May 21, with about 70 percent of Walker's 2012 donations coming from out-of-state donors.

Wisconsin Governor Scott Walker scored more than a personal victory in Tuesday's state recall vote. He delivered a psychological boost for the Republicans and a blow to Democrats that could linger until the Nov. 6 presidential election.

Walker, a Republican, sailed to a surprisingly easy win over Democrat Tom Barrett, ending a bitter 15-month political battle over Walker's efforts to eliminate most collective-bargaining rights for Wisconsin's public sector unions.

Many of Walker's national supporters — who flooded the state with anti-Barrett ads and gave Walker a more than 7-to-1 financial advantage — saw the results as a vindication of his take-no-prisoners brand of fiscal conservatism.

They also said Walker passed what amounted to a test of voter sentiment on Republican efforts to limit government, slash spending and challenge public sector unions, a result that could elevate his stature in U.S. politics.

Yesterday, conservatives were viewing Walker's victory as a green light for Republican-led state legislatures and governments to move forward, and as a boost for Republican presidential contender Mitt Romney. REUTERS

Obama still opposes extending tax cuts for rich

AIR FORCE ONE. President Barack Obama continues to oppose extending Bush-era tax cuts for wealthier Americans, the White House said yesterday, shrugging off calls for a temporary extension to allow more time for a deal on deficits.

"President Obama has been clear about his position and it has not changed," the White House press secretary, Jay Carney, told reporters traveling with Obama to California. "We should not extend and he will not extend the ... Bush-era tax cuts for the wealthiest two percent of the American people."

Democrats in Congress backed Obama. "We agree with the administration that Republicans should not risk a tax hike on the middle class on Jan. 1 by insisting that millionaires and billionaires get a tax break, too," said Brian Fallon, a Senate Democratic leadership spokesman. REUTERS

WASHINGTON. Condoleezza Rice plans to endorse Republican White House hopeful Mitt Romney, a source familiar with her decision said.

On Wall Street, nowhere to hide as job fears hover

Wall Street bankers are bracing for another round of job cuts as a downturn in the global economy cuts into earnings from deal making, capital raising and lending.

Investors, consultants and analysts say that the big banks are just not bringing in the revenue needed to keep their workforces at current levels, especially given the cost of complying with new regulations.

The share prices of the big American banks, which are mostly trading below book value, tell the tale. And bank earnings for the second quarter, most of them to be reported next month, are expected to underscore the gloom. Many on Wall Street say pink slips are likely to follow.

"If things don't get better, then I would expect staffing levels to come down for sure," said Alan Johnson, chief executive of Wall Street compensation consulting firm Johnson Associates, who estimated that banks may cut another 5 percent of their workforce by year's end.

"If things don't get better, then I would expect staffing levels to come down for sure."
ALAN JOHNSON

"When banks do that reassessment, it will go beyond just the short-term economics. They'll be asking, 'Where is the global economy going? And is there going to be a recovery, or more of a struggle than a recovery?'" REUTERS

Bleak quarter

- As Europe lurches from one crisis to the next — on Tuesday, Spain said that it is shut out of credit markets — and economic growth slows in the United States. Major developing economies such as Brazil, China and India have also been slowing, providing little relief.
- Trading volumes are low and merger activity has fallen, while low interest rates are translating into lower profits on lending.
- JPMorgan analyst Kian Abouhossein predicts a 32 percent decline in global banks' trading revenue from fixed income, currency and commodities during the second quarter, along with a 14 percent drop from equities trading and a 17 percent drop from investment banking.
- The IPO market is in no better shape. Well-publicized difficulties with Facebook Inc.'s $16 billion mega-IPO on May 18 have only further damped interest in bringing IPOs to market, as has the recent slide in stock markets.

Why did Miley want a ring on it?

"I'm happy to share this news with you all. I feel like all my dreams are coming true," the 19-year-old tweeted yesterday. The news comes after Cyrus took a break from recording and acting to spend time with Hemsworth, 22, and do uncomfortable interviews about their sex life.

Now, why would a 19-year-old who is not pregnant or struggling with rent money get married? Good question. At first, we were worried good old-fashioned love still existed and had been listening this whole time, but it's not quite that simple.

You see, these two met on the set of "The Last Song," a 2010 drama based on a novel by Nicholas Sparks — the same Nicholas Sparks who penned the most graphic of emotional girl porn, "The Notebook."

At least she fell in rabid zombie love with a cute Australian actor and not the creepy guy sweeping up popcorn.

Amanda Bynes wants justice

Amanda Bynes refused to take a breathalyzer or blood test when she was pulled over back in April, but she's not admitting to drinking and driving. The actress sent her lawyer to court yesterday with a not-guilty plea for the DUI charge, which could land her in jail for a minimum of 48 hours if she's convicted.

A court date is set for July 18, but in the meantime, she's not staying silent. "Hey @BarackObama... I don't drink. Please fire the cop who arrested me," she posted to her Twitter page.

John Mayer is finally humiliated

With a new album coming out, John Mayer had been trying to play nice in the media — but he's got his foot back in his smug little mouth again after an interview with Rolling Stone, in which he whines about ex-girlfriend Taylor Swift's song about their split, "Dear John." He calls the hit "humiliating," taking issue with the then-20-year-old's "cheap songwriting": "It's abusing your talent to rub your hands together and go, 'Wait till he gets a load of this!' That's bulls—."

Let us never be too cool for 'Piranha 3DD'

3 New "Real Housewives of New York" cast member Aviva Drescher hosted the show's Season 5 kickoff party at NYC lounge and bowling alley Frames on Monday night, where she was able to get in a little family time when not partying with her new crew.

4 Our favorite kind of airport candy: Chris Hemsworth was spotted in London's Heathrow Airport yesterday.

5 Another reason we love David Hasselhoff: Not only does he star in "Piranha 3DD," he seems genuinely excited about it.

5 REASONS TO TAKE AN ANDROID BUDDY TO THE MOVIES THIS WEEKEND

Must-see

1 'Prometheus' One of the summer's most hotly anticipated films is finally out this weekend. Ridley Scott returns to the franchise he started with the 1979 classic film "Alien," but this film may or not be a prequel. A group of scientists and engineers travel to a foreign planet in the hopes of discovering their origin.

20TH CENTURY FOX

3 'Snow White and the Huntsman' This year's second revival of the fairy tale about the fairest in the land and her seven little buddies is much grittier than its glossy predecessor, "Mirror Mirror."

4 'Men in Black 3' Agents J (Will Smith) and K (Tommy Lee Jones) are back in business, keeping alien life forms under control on Earth, until K is mysteriously erased from existence and J must travel to 1969 to find young K before things go awry.

5 'Chernobyl Diaries' Oren Peli, the mind behind the "Paranormal Activity" movies, presents the tale of six Americans on an "extreme tourism" trip to Pripyat. They inevitably find themselves stranded — but not alone.

The Queen Extravaganza: They are the champions

Recently, Metro had the chance to ask Queen drummer Roger Taylor if he'd seen the clips of Snoop Dogg and Dr. Dre performing with a representation of the late Tupac Shakur at Coachella.

This is Martel. Notice how much he looks like Freddie Mercury!

"I've heard a lot about those clips," he says. "I have not seen them, but I know the guys and I know the technology involved."

You can probably guess where we're going with this, Metro wonders. "I can, I think," counters Taylor, whose most famous collaborator, Freddie Mercury, died in 1991. So would Taylor and Queen's still active guitarist Brian May be open to the idea of playing with a hologram?

"I would not like to perform with a hologram of Freddie," he says definitively. "Brian and [I] looked at the possibility of putting a hologram in our show in London, 'We Will Rock You.'"

Ultimately the pair decided not to use a hologram for that production or for their latest endeavor. Instead Taylor and May are putting their efforts into the very human Queen Extravaganza, a group which includes two guitarists, a bassist, a drummer and four vocalists, all found through a three-month online audition search. One of the main singers, Marc Martel, has particularly moved Taylor. "I was sitting down writing something, facing away from the stage yesterday and Mark was singing 'Bohemian Rhapsody,' and I had chills down my spine," he says. "It was as if Freddie was in the room."

PHOTOS: GETTY IMAGES

That, along with the fact that Martel has an uncanny physical resemblance to Freddie Mercury sounds like enough reason not to have a projected image of the late singer on the stage. "It just doesn't sit too well with me," says Taylor. "I don't want to appear with a hologram of my dear friend." PAT HEALY

Is it time to X out your ex?

TIM SPELLMAN/WIREIMAGE

Cameron Diaz is a good example of someone who does not burn her bridges of love. A-Rod's said that he cherished her even after they broke up, and she worked with Justin Timberlake on a movie after they had a relationship. It's clear that she doesn't cut people completely out of her life once the romance is gone. Some might say that's a good thing, but what could it mean to her future relationships? If you've kept up with your exes, you might want to keep reading.

Not all relationships end on a bad note. Sometimes the timing isn't right, or the spark is gone, but you really still like the other person. Is it so bad to text or call every once in a while, to see how that person's doing? How much contact with an ex is OK? The answer is, it depends.

To begin with, does your current partner know you are in touch with your former partner? If so, and he or she doesn't see it as a threat, then I would say a little contact with your old lover is harmless. But if you are keeping it a secret, that could be a red flag that there is more going on that you are not comfortable enough to share with your new flame. If what you are doing with your ex is taking away from your new relationship — either by creating problems or taking energy away from your new relationship — that might be an indication that it's time to close that door.

Finally, there is the chance that you are fueling your ex's possible hope that you will get back together, or maybe you are keeping that door open just in case things don't work out this time around. If you are aware of that, shift your energy to the future, instead of the past, because it is probably holding you back.

Sometimes it is what brought you together that endures. Other times, you might want to remember why you broke up in the first place.

Blame the workers, not corporations!

RE: "GREEDY CORPORATIONS ARE ANTI-AMERICAN": In response to JD's letter about the supposed effort to crush unions, he needs to understand that high union wages have made some companies move plants overseas in order to compete with lower-wage companies. Mercedes has plants in Mexico and Eastern Europe because the wages of unionized auto workers in Germany are so high. If manufacturers in high-wage countries cannot lower some of their costs, they will lose market share and some will go bankrupt. Everyone would like high wages, but the reality is that in a global economy, this isn't always possible. Hopefully, readers who don't understand business will read up on it. RON FALCON, VIA E-MAIL

Does JD Ducas have an iPhone? He obviously has a computer, but I'll bet he enjoys paying low prices for clothes and other thingamajigs too. In fact, if he owns one thing that doesn't say made in the USA then he must be a traitor! The fact is consumers demand low prices, and entrepreneurs figure out how to incorporate low-cost labor to meet that demand. Does this make them unpatriotic? He should direct his anger at the politicians and the unions for destroying these opportunities in America, while lining their greedy pockets with crony capital. HANS HAUGEN, VIA E-MAIL

I am so tired of people screaming for equality and in the same sentence saying we should tax the rich more and the poor less. Businesses can only support what their incomes will allow. If their output is more than their input, they begin laying people off and looking for other ways to cut costs — such as relocating. We are no longer competing with American companies; we are competing on a global front, which is why Apple is having their phones manufactured in China for $4 an hour. JOEY WHITMOYER, VIA E-MAIL

There is no doubt there are greedy corporations, and I am not defending immoral or unethical behavior. First, JD, you have the ability to buy products and services from virtually any company you want — so if you want to personally boycott "greedy overseas corporations" go right ahead. I very much doubt, however, that you buy solely American-made products. If you increase the cost to operate a business (i.e. through higher taxes, minimum wage laws or forced unionization) that business will try and find ways to cut costs before passing them on to their customers. Believe it or not, we as Americans actually benefit from overseas products. These products cost less to produce and therefore have a lower retail price. Cheaper products make every American wealthier! KELLY DONNOE, VIA E-MAIL

RE: "HOW DO WOMEN VOTE FOR REPUBLICANS?!": Mr. Keeley, I ask myself the same question whenever I see a woman proudly proclaiming herself part of a religion that believes and treats her like a second-class citizen. While we're on the subject, I keep wondering why gay men and women support the Republican party, which has continually invalidated their humanity. BARB MILUSKI, VIA E-MAIL

Horoscope

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Having little patience or respect for those who throw their weight around or don't do things exactly the way you wish could cause you to speak up in ways you'll regret.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Unless you find a release for your irritability, you could become so frustrated that you're likely to pick a fight over the least little thing. Being aware of your state can help you work on it.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Assess the costs in both time and money before committing yourself to a group involvement. If the event doesn't warrant your time and energy, beg off.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. That curiosity of yours is likely to be a bit more intense than usual, and it could tempt you to put your nose into places where it doesn't belong. Keep your sniffer focused on your own odors.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. It's important not to misinterpret a friend's remarks or independent behavior as disloyalty of any kind. Allow him or her to be blunt at times and to follow his or her own star.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. By reacting in kind to the irritable crankiness of someone in your household, you could unnecessarily set off an explosion among the clan. Bite your tongue or count to 10 instead.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. If you can't afford to splurge a little, it would be best to leave all your credit cards at home. It will be far too easy for you to yield to your extravagant urges right now. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

MLB player with at least 10 homers, 10 steals and a .300 average through Tuesday. It's Ryan Braun, who is proving that he's perhaps fantasy's best player despite the steroid cloud.

FARMING FOR HELP

June has to be among the year's greatest months. Flowers blooming, kids graduating and MLB prospects getting the call.

Due to arbitration rules, teams watching their wallets usually wait until mid-June to promote their future stars. It's when we've seen studs like Andrew McCutchen and Stephen Strasburg make their debuts. Here's the next wave of guys that can help fantasy teams this season:

Bow to Bauer

Through 12 minor league starts this season, 21-year-old Trevor Bauer is 9-1 with a 1.96 ERA. Drawing comparisons to Tim Lincecum, he's struck out 91 batters in 73 1/3 innings. Bauer is fully expected be promoted to the Diamondbacks' starting rotation by the end of the month. He has front-line starter stuff.

The real Rizzo

Anthony Rizzo was a hot prospect in San Diego, but that's where hitters go to die. Now that he's in the Cubs' organization, there's a lot more upside. Rizzo is hitting .363 with 17 homers and 47 RBIs through 52 Triple-A games this season.

Halladay profit

When the Blue Jays gave up Roy Halladay, they acquired a young catcher from the Phillies named Travis D'Arnaud. Now that young catcher is the best prospect at his position in the game. D'Arnaud is hitting .321 with 13 homers in Triple-A this season and is a better defensive prospect than J.P. Arencibia. There's room to promote D'Arnaud and turn Arencibia into a designated hitter.

GETTY IMAGES

Baseball waivers

Stay on the grind that is the waiver wire:

1 A.J. Burnett, SP, PIT — Forget about the stigma of Burnett's Yankee woes. He's allowed three runs or less in eight of his nine starts this season.

2 Lonnie Chisenhall, 3B, CLE — One of the game's best hitting prospects has nine homers and 25 RBIs in his first 73 MLB games. He figures to stay in the lineup plenty even when Jack Hannahan (calf) gets healthy.

3 Allen Craig, 1B/OF, STL — The Wrench is back off the DL and raking once again. Even if Lance Berkman (knee) comes back, it's obvious that Craig will be playing every day.

Vick seeks to improve on accuracy

GETTY IMAGES

Vick

Picking up the blitz and improving accuracy are the keys to a successful season for Mike Vick. However, the Eagles quarterback made no mention of making a more concerted effort to slide instead of taking big hits.

"My ultimate goal each and every year is to improve my accuracy and just creating a general understanding of the offense in and out and know where all my guys are going to be," Vick said yesterday. "I'm trying to just come in and get better with the blitz and blitz schemes, so I can get my guys in the right spots at the right times."

Vick threw a career-high 14 interceptions last season and accounted for a whopping 18 total turnovers. Some have hinted that he holds onto the ball too long in the pocket. But Vick insists his mechanics aren't to blame.

"I'm too late in my career to start changing my form, so I'm just focusing in on ball placement, and I think it's just a mind-set to get the ball where it needs to be," Vick said. "When you change things mechanically, usually it means changing your form."

▶ Roy Halladay updated the media on his status yesterday. He is still expected to miss six to eight weeks.

Halladay taking it easy, wants to stay with Phils

◗ Staff ace confirms he'll miss 6 to 8 weeks ◗ Right-hander promises to follow doctor's orders ◗ Doc prefers to finish career in red pinstripes

The Phillies' ace updated his adoring fans on a variety of topics. For one, he won't pick up a baseball for three weeks. He's been on the disabled list after hurting his shoulder on May 27. The total timetable for his return is projected at six to eight weeks. Halladay, known for his beastly workout routines, realizes he has to follow the doctor's orders.

"As much as I want to be back, I want to make sure that when I am back, it's not something I have to address later on," Halladay said.

It's also been reported that the setback could potentially cost Halladay $20 million. The three-year extension he signed included a vesting option for 2014. Hitting that is contingent upon the amount of innings he throws between 2012 and 2013 (415), a number that seems unattainable if he's out for an extended period. If he doesn't toss those 415 innings, the Phillies could choose to let him walk away as a free agent.

"It's a year and a half away," Halladay said. "Ultimately, my goal is to finish my career with the Phillies and win a World Series here. Some of those things are not fully in my control, but my intent is to play here and finish my career here, and be here as long as I can." METRO
